Dear Headmaster,

Looking back at Jonathan Lovegrove's record over the past year, I am extremely pleased at the way he is developing, and his Housemaster shares my enthusiasm.

It is true that the general standard of his work is not yet by any means satisfactory; he is still careless, untidy and forgetful, but I am sure that there is no vice in him. He is undoubtedly intelligent, and his attitude is always friendly, co-operative, and almost desperately eager to please.

He has represented both the School and his House at Athletics, and he sings in the Choir.

His lack of ability to organise his life efficiently is the one remaining obstacle which he has to overcome, - and quite a formidable one too.

If he can achieve this in time, (and judging by the marked improvement in his whole outlook during the past year, I believe that he can,) he will turn into a first-rate citizen.

Yours sincerely,

Mark Wigmore.
